The Canadian Wheat Producer and the British Empire

The Imperial Conference just concluded has opened up a new chapter in the history of the wheat trade between Canada and the British Empire. It is the first time that the wheat trade between Canada and the British Empire has been discussed in a formal way. The conference has decided that the wheat trade between Canada and the British Empire should be handled in a more efficient way. This will be done by the formation of a new organization, the Canadian Wheat Producers' Association, which will be responsible for the marketing of Canadian wheat in the British Empire.

Some critics of the preferential scheme, however, have stated that even though Canadian wheat is sold at a higher price than wheat from other countries, it is not sold in as large quantities as it should be. This is because the preferential scheme is not as well known as it should be. The Canadian Wheat Producers' Association is now working to increase the knowledge of the preferential scheme among Canadian wheat producers and British Empire buyers.

The British Grain Company, which is the largest grain merchant in the world, has announced that it will be buying Canadian wheat in large quantities. This is a very important development for the Canadian wheat trade. It shows that the British Empire is still a major market for Canadian wheat. The Canadian Wheat Producers' Association is very pleased with this news and is confident that the preferential scheme will continue to be successful.

The preferential scheme of 1923 has been a great success for the Canadian wheat trade. It has allowed Canadian wheat to be sold at a higher price than wheat from other countries. This has helped Canadian wheat producers to increase their income. The Canadian Wheat Producers' Association is now working to ensure that the preferential scheme continues to be successful.

The British Empire is a very important market for Canadian wheat. It is the largest market for Canadian wheat in the world. The Canadian Wheat Producers' Association is very dependent on the British Empire for its income. It is therefore very important that the preferential scheme continues to be successful. THE PRICE OF WHEAT

During the past few hundred years there have been three major wars—the Thirty Years' War in Germany—the Napoleonic Wars and the recent World War. The price of wheat and all other commodities rose sharply during each war, and immediately after each war, it gradually fell, more or less commensurate with the lower levels than when the war started. Price fluctuations in wheat of the last few years have been almost exactly the same (very few harmful price fluctuations have ever taken place excepting as a result of war). During a war there is usually a sharp increase in government prices for large amounts of paper and other commodities, and people indulge in speculative purchases, all of which increases the amount of money and no reason for the increase. When people have faith and confidence in the paper money which is supported by metal or gold, the amount of speculation is limited, but when the amount of speculation is increased, the unusually high prices, due to paper credit, fall to the level justified by the amount of gold or silver available and in use for money purposes. High prices for the money have had a great increased production of securities and injuries for which the underlying poor consumers had no effective demand—the money prices also up and came a further price decline. So, two causes have increased the loss of confidence in inflated credit money, and the accumulated surplus over the demand.

SAVING BABIES

What is a baby's life worth?
We will not attempt to answer that it is beyond our ability to value.
However, we agree that every child should be given a fair chance. No one questions the right of the baby to protection from harm. Obviously it is of advantage to the baby and to the nation that they have a proper start in life, so that they may grow up into strong and healthy adults.

The past few years have seen great progress made in the control of unavoidable diseases. A particularly notable achievement has been the saving of infant lives. There are in the country thousands of child who are still well and who would have died as babies if conditions had not changed for the better.

The decrease in the number of infant deaths is a satisfactory evidence that the efforts which have been made are "bearing fruit." It also indicates that the work done has been along the right lines.

Maternal of today know more about the getting of their infants than ever before, and so their babies receive more intelligent attention.
No matter how much we may add to our efforts, we will not appreciate the willingness of mothers to sacrifice themselves for their children.

It is the duty of the medical profession and the health service to take the place of knowledge.
We must not only know the disease and that the death rate among preschool children has been definitely lowered in the winter than when it was at its highest, but we must also know the "how" of the disease.
Although we may not yet know our grandparents, we realize that they were not always well in their day of babies. In those days many children died because their parents were ignorant of facts which we know today. It is our duty to pass on this knowledge to intelligent parents.

In the midst of trying conditions we have before us a challenge to continue and improve the facts of save babies. We have gone far, but we can go much farther. Babies still die who could be saved, and whose lives would be saved if their parents were better informed.

Program is gratifying, but it should not mislead us; rather it should serve as a spur to drive us on to added efforts toward the great problem of more and more babies being saved in the care of their mothers. It is the duty of the Canadian medical association, the Canadian Red Cross, the Canadian Association, 184 College Street, Toronto, to be interested personally by letter.

May Establish Pension Office For Imperial

At a joint meeting of the provincial council of the Canadian Legion and representatives of the Imperial Veterans, held at Calgary recently, the question of the establishment of an advisory office in Calgary for Imperial pensioners, was discussed at some length and it was decided to have the proposals put in writing for delivery by the Legion council at a later date.

It was pointed out by the Imperial representatives that Calgary was being looked upon and used extensively by Imperial pensioners from all over Canada, and that the Imperial Veterans, who were more especially interested in the pensioners, were numerous cases of pensioners had been brought to a successful conclusion in the year, according to a report from W. Sherry, secretary of the Imperial
